Introduction

Real estate traditionally attracts much attention from investors due to the secure cash flows derived from rental income and the low correlation of real estate returns with equities and bonds. Furthermore, in Europe property leases are indexed, which makes the rental cash flows insensitive to inflation. The European real estate market is currently in a process of professionalisation as corporates and government entities offload the real estate from their balance sheets by selling to specialist real estate investors. As real estate was never a core part of the previous owners' businesses, the properties tend to be undermanaged, allowing their new owners to extract additional value from the properties they acquire. The introduction of Real Estate Investment Trusts (REITs) in many European countries is accelerating the professionalisation of the real estate sector, as it offers many public and private entities an attractive exit for their real estate at a reduced tax rate. Real estate securities and REITs provide investors a liquid route to gain a diversified exposure to European real estate.

Investment Philosophy

The Insinger de Beaufort Real Estate Equity Fund invests in the shares of European REITs and real estate companies. The objective of the fund is to generate superior risk-adjusted returns, by reducing the volatility and protecting the downside using shorts and derivatives. Security selection is based on the expected total returns of different real estate securities using a fundamental bottom-up valuation model. As the European real estate market is not a homogenous market and rental growth cycles do not move in tandem, there is a large divergence between the returns of different real estate securities. The fund aims to capitalise on these differences by arbitraging between real estate securities in different property markets. On the long side, the fund focuses on specialised real estate companies in attractive property markets with a proven competitive advantage and value creation track record in that market. On the short side, the fund aims to find overpriced real estate securities in property markets with unattractive fundamentals. The fund also uses derivatives to manage the net exposure of the fund. The fund does not use leverage.
